

Biography

Tobias Denskus is a Senior Lecturer and MA Program Coordinator for Communication for Development at Malmö Höskola. He has a background in peace research, development studies and organizational anthropology. His current research focuses on digital communication topics, e.g. development blogging, the use of Twitter in international policy arenas as well as critical research on TED talks and open data discourses. More generally, he is curious how media and communication will transform organizations, challenge academic teaching and create new opportunities for social change. Tobias blogs at www.aidnography.de
